

2025 PHYSICIAN LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT CONFERENCE - In Review

More than 140 physician leaders and hospital executives gathered at the 2025 WHA Physician Leadership Development Conference March 14 and 15 in Kohler, WI. This year's presentations focused on physician engagement and wellbeing, the current health care climate challenges the state is facing, leading teams and creating a culture where physicians and others can thrive. This annual leadership educational event allowed attendees to learn, network and share successes and challenges with colleagues from around the state.

FEATURED SPEAKERS

Chris DeRienzo, MD, MPP, Senior Vice President and Chief Physician Executive from the American Hospital Association, kicked off the conference with his presentation Why Physician Engagement is Imperative in Tackling External Threats to Patient Care, and How Physician Leaders can Shepherd Physician Voice to Drive Positive Change. He discussed how the investment of resources into keeping physicians engaged with their work and involving them in the decision-making process is a positive move that benefits not only the physician, but the hospital and the community.

Eric Borgerding

Eric Borgerding, President and CEO of the Wisconsin Hospital Association discussed Identifying and Addressing Current Challenges Impacting Physician Practice in Wisconsin. He shared that understanding what these external challenges are can help equip physician leaders better in communicating to staff the "why" and "how" these external factors drive disruptions and change within their hospitals. He also shared how physician leaders can be effective advocates with government officials for positive health care policy change.

Andy Hillig, Managing Director, Career Management of the LAK Group, led a discussion and activities surrounding Leading High-Functioning Teams: Habits of Systems Thinkers that Build Followership. He emphasized that leaders of high-functioning teams need to be enthusiastic and intentional about having a holistic understanding of the organization. They also need to understand the impact of their decisions and behaviors by seeking to understand their relationships, effects and delays among information, problems, people, events, departments and systems.

Nadine Allen and Ann Zenk

WHA's Nadine Allen, Chief Quality Officer and Ann Zenk, Senior Vice President of Workforce and Clinical Practice, started day two with Advancing Physician Wellbeing – Survey of Current Internal and External Strategies. Nadine and Ann shared data and insights around this critical topic.

As with previous years, the closing presentation for the Physician Leadership Development Conference was An Executive Physician's Personal Leadership Journey. This year, attendees had the pleasure of hearing from Imran Andrabi, MD, President and CEO of Froedtert ThedaCare Health, as he shared his unique and interesting career journey.
