

WHA Foundation Launches Statewide Workforce Campaign New campaign targets youth and aims to boost the state's health care workforce

The WHA Foundation is unveiling a new workforce campaign entitled So Many Options to attract new workers to Wisconsin's health care workforce and foster a thriving and sustainable workforce for generations to come.

The statewide campaign features targeted digital advertising and the launch of a dedicated website to showcase the abundant health care career options – both clinical and non-clinical – available to current and prospective employees throughout Wisconsin. With a particular focus on middle and high school students, the campaign aims to inspire younger generations to pursue these career opportunities by highlighting appealing aspects such as competitive compensation, flexible schedules and wide-ranging educational requirements.

"Whether young, prospective employees are looking for their first job or veteran health care workers are looking to transition careers, there are countless health care career options throughout Wisconsin's hospitals, no matter a person's background or vocational interest," said WHA President and CEO Eric Borgerding. "Careers in hospitals and health care are consistently in high demand, offering stability and enduring relevance. These professions are essential and will always be needed."

The So Many Options campaign's spokespeople are real clinical and non-clinical employees from hospitals across the state, including Reedsburg Area Medical Center, ThedaCare Regional Medical Center in Appleton and Aurora St. Luke's in Milwaukee. The So Many Options website guides users through descriptions of a variety of health care professions based on personal interests and educational background and connects users to a number of workforce-related resources, including WHA, Future Health Professionals (HOSA) and Wisconsin Area Health Education Centers (AHEC).

The campaign is made possible through generous sponsorship support from other organizations, including Presenting Sponsor, Rural Wisconsin Health Cooperative (RWHC).
